Primary Outreach Efforts

- We conducted 152 hours of outreach to small business owners and non-profit leaders across Berkeley

Business Owner Meetings

- Door-to-door outreach to existing businesses to inform them of the program, its benefits, and any upcoming information sessions

Information Sessions

- Series of 2-hour information sessions that introduce business owners to the program and provide tips and tools to help them keep their businesses in their community

Small Business Events

- Information booths and flyering at various small business events, street fairs, and festivals

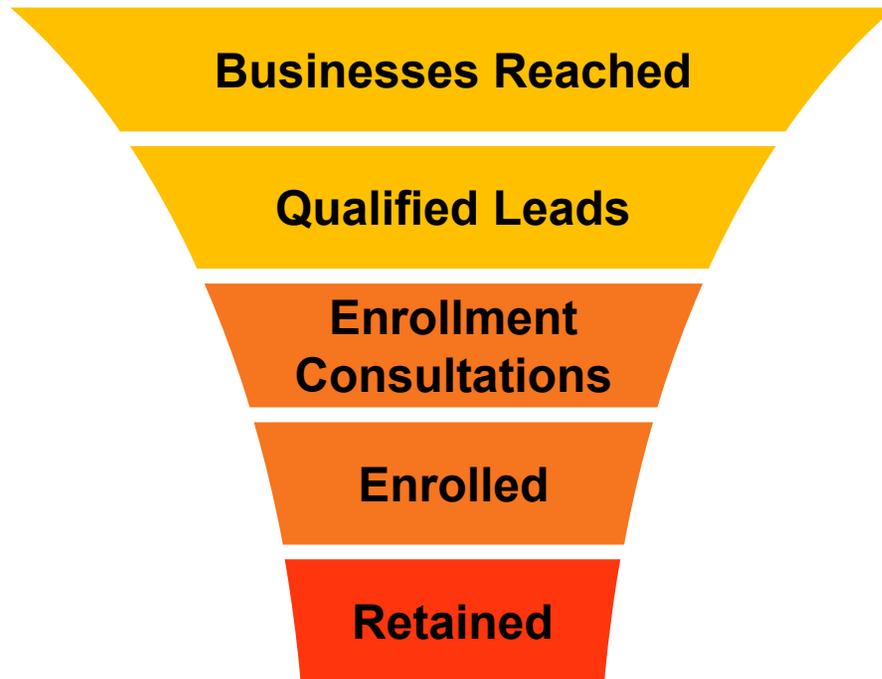

Partner Organizations

- Emails and meetings with business districts, chamber, and business support, legal, financial, and real estate partners

Grassroots, face-to-face outreach proved effective in building trust with the small business and non-profit community

Business Advising Findings

- Small businesses and non-profits were facing serious financial challenges prior to the pandemic, but for some, relief funds have been game-changing
- Relationship with property owners is key to retention success
- Having a long-term advising support is critical
- Successful retention advising requires a breadth of technical skills and emotional intelligence
- Lack of confidence in current plans has to do with uncertainty around COVID-19
- There is a desire to have more advising time through recovery

Recommendations

- Create additional grant relief funding
- Increase marketing of small businesses and non-profits
- Provide more support in landlord negotiations
- Improve city support in commercial corridors
- Extend and refine business retention program to support more at-risk businesses during COVID-19 recovery
- Increase networking and peer support opportunities
- Improve visibility of city services that support business owners
